

They stood on searing rooftops.

They trudged through dirtied waters.

They were ushered into cramped, dangerous quarters.

Still, no one came.

When President Bush turned his back on the tragedy of Katrina,

Governor Jennifer M. Granholm reached out and opened the state's arms.

She offered a home to as many as 10,000 people.

On the anniversary of this great human tragedy,
the failures of the Bush administration don't get to be a distant memory.

The need for someone to stand up for every day citizens remains clear.

Governor Granholm has stood up to Bush's practice of turning his back on every day citizens.

She has:

- Extended health care and prescription drug coverage to tens of thousands in Michigan.
- Created affordable homes for seniors and working families.
  - Brought jobs to Michigan.

While some would like to forget, Governor Granholm refuses to abandon our communities.

And we shouldn't forget who stood with us.

That's why the Michigan Democratic State Central Committee is proud to have paid for this message.
